Faculty	Faculty of Business & Accounting
Assessment Name (Eg: End/Sup)	End ICA	Paper Code	BBM1/G23/E-1
Module Name	Business Management 1	Module Code	B5-BM1-20
Semester (E.g Jul-Dec-2021)	Jul-Dec-2023	Submission Mode (E.g Turnitin, blackboard, hardcopy)	Blackboard
Total Marks	100	Duration	06-10 Nov 2023
Assessment Type (Eg: Written/Practical/Submission)	Written	Exam/Submission Date	10 Nov 2023

Instructions

Please make sure that:

1. The following information is included on your cover page (Your full name and student ID, Module name and code, Title of your work, and Lecturer name.).
2. Use font size 12, 1.5 line spacing, and Times Roman font (Visually impaired students may use relevant larger font).
3. The assignment should be typed, and submit your work as a Word document, NOT a PDF or Note Pad.
4. You will be given multiple attempts (x3) on safe assign to check plagiarism, and the marks will be allocated to the final submitted assignment.
5. Justify all texts, paragraphs, and the number of all pages except the cover page.
6. Answers should be clear, and readable, and use the Harvard method of referencing.
7. Save the file in your name (e.g. Naledi_Trump_End ICA.doc)
8. Note that Case Study questions are application-based and you can provide secondary research to support your answers as a mere listing of theory/listing of answers will not earn marks.
9. Due date: 10 November 2023. Submit through Blackboard safe-assign.

SECTION A – [40 MARKS]

N.B Answer all Questions in this section.

1. State four types of plans that managers can utilize. (4 marks)
2. Briefly explain each of the following theories: X, Y, and Z. (6 marks)
3. Describe the four functions all managers perform. (4 marks)
4. Elaborate on the challenges and rewards of being a manager. (6 marks)
5. According to your understanding, elucidate what business management is all about. (10 marks)
6. For any business of your choice, identify the key stakeholders in any business, and elaborate on what their interest is. (10 marks)

SECTION B – [40 MARKS]

N.B Answer any TWO Questions of your choice from this section.

1. Imagine working as a consultant with a rapidly growing technology startup. The company has just experienced significant success with its first product and is now planning to expand its product line and market presence. Explain to top management any ten (10) limitations of planning, that they need to be aware of that might negatively affect expansion. (20 marks)

2. Suppose you are a tutor of business management at a prestigious business school, and you are delivering a lecture on the evolution of management theories, and you are asked to Compare and contrast contemporary approaches with classical approaches, what will be your answer? (20 marks)

3. Presume you are appointed as a senior executive at a well-established multinational corporation. You are leading a training session for a group of newly promoted managers within your company, who are eager to understand the fundamental roles and responsibilities of a manager. In your new role as manager, could you explain in detail the ten (10) key roles that managers typically play in an organization, and provide some insight into how each role contributes to effective management and the success of our company? (20 marks)

SECTION C – [20 MARKS]

Compulsory Case Studies –Large Bank

Bill Bells worked for a major bank for a number of years. He began as a messenger before being allocated to a branch. He advanced from a bookkeeping clerk to a platform assistant in this department. In this role, he was primarily responsible for providing administrative support to the branch's officers. The numerous branches of the bank were divided regionally, with a group of officers responsible for each region's branches. Bill was transferred from the branch he had worked at for the past 12 years to a branch in a different region. One of the four officers had retired one month prior to Bill's transfer, and two weeks after this officer's retirement, the branch manager was hospitalized with a serious illness. At the time of his transfer, he was informed that the branch's operational procedures and systems were entirely "run down."

The normal complement of the division consisted of 4 officers and 35 staff members. When Bill arrived at his new position, he discovered a rather demoralizing environment. The remaining two officers displayed a complete lack of interest, and the remainder of the staff lacks proper training and discipline. The regional office informed the two officers that Bill would be assigned to the branch as a temporary platform replacement for only two weeks.

Bill discovered during his first week at the branch that the senior clerks were unqualified to train other employees, that customer complaints were rampant, that there was a record of excessive absenteeism and excessive overtime, and that the branch had received very poor audit reports from the bank's internal auditors, with the same major exceptions reported in the previous four audits. Bill was summoned to the regional office after two weeks and offered the position of operations officer. He was also informed that the current operations officer, who had held this position for seven years, would be relieved of his operational responsibilities and instructed to work with Bill until the branch was fully operational.

Bill returned to the division and immediately began his assignment. The former operations officer was cooperative for approximately one week. Bill then decided to proceed without the former operations officer's assistance. Almost every night for the next three months, he worked until 8:00 or 9:00 p.m. He attempted to resolve the issues that had developed over many years. Training employees required a substantial amount of time, and he was forced to let go of 12 clerks who were causing various problems. The remaining personnel and replacements began to function efficiently. He received his promised title.

The branch manager then returned to work following a lengthy illness. A week after his return, he summoned Bill to his office to query his branch efforts. Bill was informed that the former operations officer had mentioned that he was a disruptive influence in the division, that he had fired several excellent employees, that he did not know his job, and that he frequently left work early.

Smit, P.J et al., (2011), Management Principles: A Contemporary Edition for Africa, Juta.

Questions

1. Assuming you were Bill, how would you respond to the branch manager? (5 points)
2. Was the regional office responsible for Bill's transfer? (5 points)
3. What should the regional office do at this time? (5 points)
4. Do you consider that Bill can effectively manage this branch as a manager? (5 points)